REFUGEE SOCIAL SERVICES

Integration as a two-way, complex and multilayered process that requires both: the preparation of forced migrants to integrate into a host society and the preparation of society for accepting new members (V. Demidenko, 2019).

Integration of foreigners: methodological recommendations for experiential teaching

KITATAUČIŲ INTEGRACIJA: PATIRTINIO MOKYMO METODINĖS REKOMENDACIJOS The book reviews the relevance of preparing social workers for work with forced migrants. Forced migrants are classified as a vulnerable group experiencing trauma, psychological problems, social and educational exclusion. Unfortunately, in the modern world, the hot areas of war and repression are not diminishing. This is due to the ever-increasing number of forced migrants. Social worker often become "key providers of assistance to forced migrants in a new host country. Therefore, it is important to properly train and prepare social workers to work with this target group. Various methods are available for preparing social workers.

The book argues for the benefits of experiential education for this purpose and analyses the essential principles of experiential education. The book provides practical examples of the application of experiential learning methods in developing the intercultural skills of social workers and immigrants.
